

Press Release: New Release

Over 800 Square Miles of Land Tax records released on TheGenealogist's Map Explorer™

More than 185,000 new Lloyd George Domesday land tax records have been added by TheGenealogist to its Landowner and Occupier records. Consisting of records from the counties of Berkshire and the Buckinghamshire, this release provides researchers with the ability to discover owners and occupiers of property in the period 1910 to 1915.

Covering an area of over 800 square miles, researchers can use these records to see the size, state of repair and value of the house in which their ancestors had been the landlord of, or had lived in.

TheGenealogist has linked all the records to the large scale Ordnance Survey maps that were used at the time. These detailed maps show each property plotted on detailed mapping that can be viewed with TheGenealogist's Map Explorer™ tool. This interface will show the same coordinates on a variety of modern and historical maps. Using this allows house or family historians to see how the area they are researching may have changed over time and with it to then explore their ancestors' locality.

- Details of Individual properties can be found in these Lloyd George Domesday records
- Records are linked to extremely detailed maps used in 1910-1915 and viewable on the powerful Map Explorer™
- Ability to fully search the records by a person's name, county, parish and street

- The Ordnance Survey maps zoom down to show individual properties
- Georeferenced to a modern street map or satellite map underlay the researcher can more clearly understand what the area looks like today
